Radicel·la is a contemporary roots dance company created in 2023, formed by four performers from different fields of Catalan and Balearic traditional dance. The project is born with the aim of continuing to dance together and of growing the roots dance from experimentation, play and a contemporary perspective.

Their first show, Horabaixa, premiered at the Fira Mediterrània de Manresa, consolidates Radicel·la as a new voice in the contemporary roots dance scene, with a clear commitment to research, collective work and the re-signification of choreographic heritage.

Laia Santanach is a choreographer, dancer and teacher with a well-established track record in contemporary creation and in the dialogue between rooted dance and new scenic languages. Her approach emphasises collective processes, the relationship between body and rhythm, and the transformation of traditional material into contemporary scenic language.

Repic is a traditional contemporary dance performance that places the castanet at the centre of its scenic research, understood as a sonic, bodily and relational instrument.

The project takes as its starting point the study of rhythmic tapping as a shared physical and rhythmic action, exploring repetition, collective listening and the construction of a common body through sound.

Far from a folklorised reading, Repic proposes a contemporary re-reading of the castanet and folk dance as living heritage, capable of generating new scenic languages and establishing solid bridges between tradition and current creation.

Sound becomes movement, movement generates rhythm and rhythm articulates the relationships between the performers, placing the link between the individual and the collective at the centre of the piece.

Concept and Scenic Universe

The piece is part of contemporary roots dance, understanding tradition and popular elements not as a closed form but as a field for research, transmission and transformation. Repic draws on the bodily and rhythmic knowledge inherent in traditional dance to activate new scenic interpretations.

The castanet functions as an extension of the body and as a shared non-verbal language.

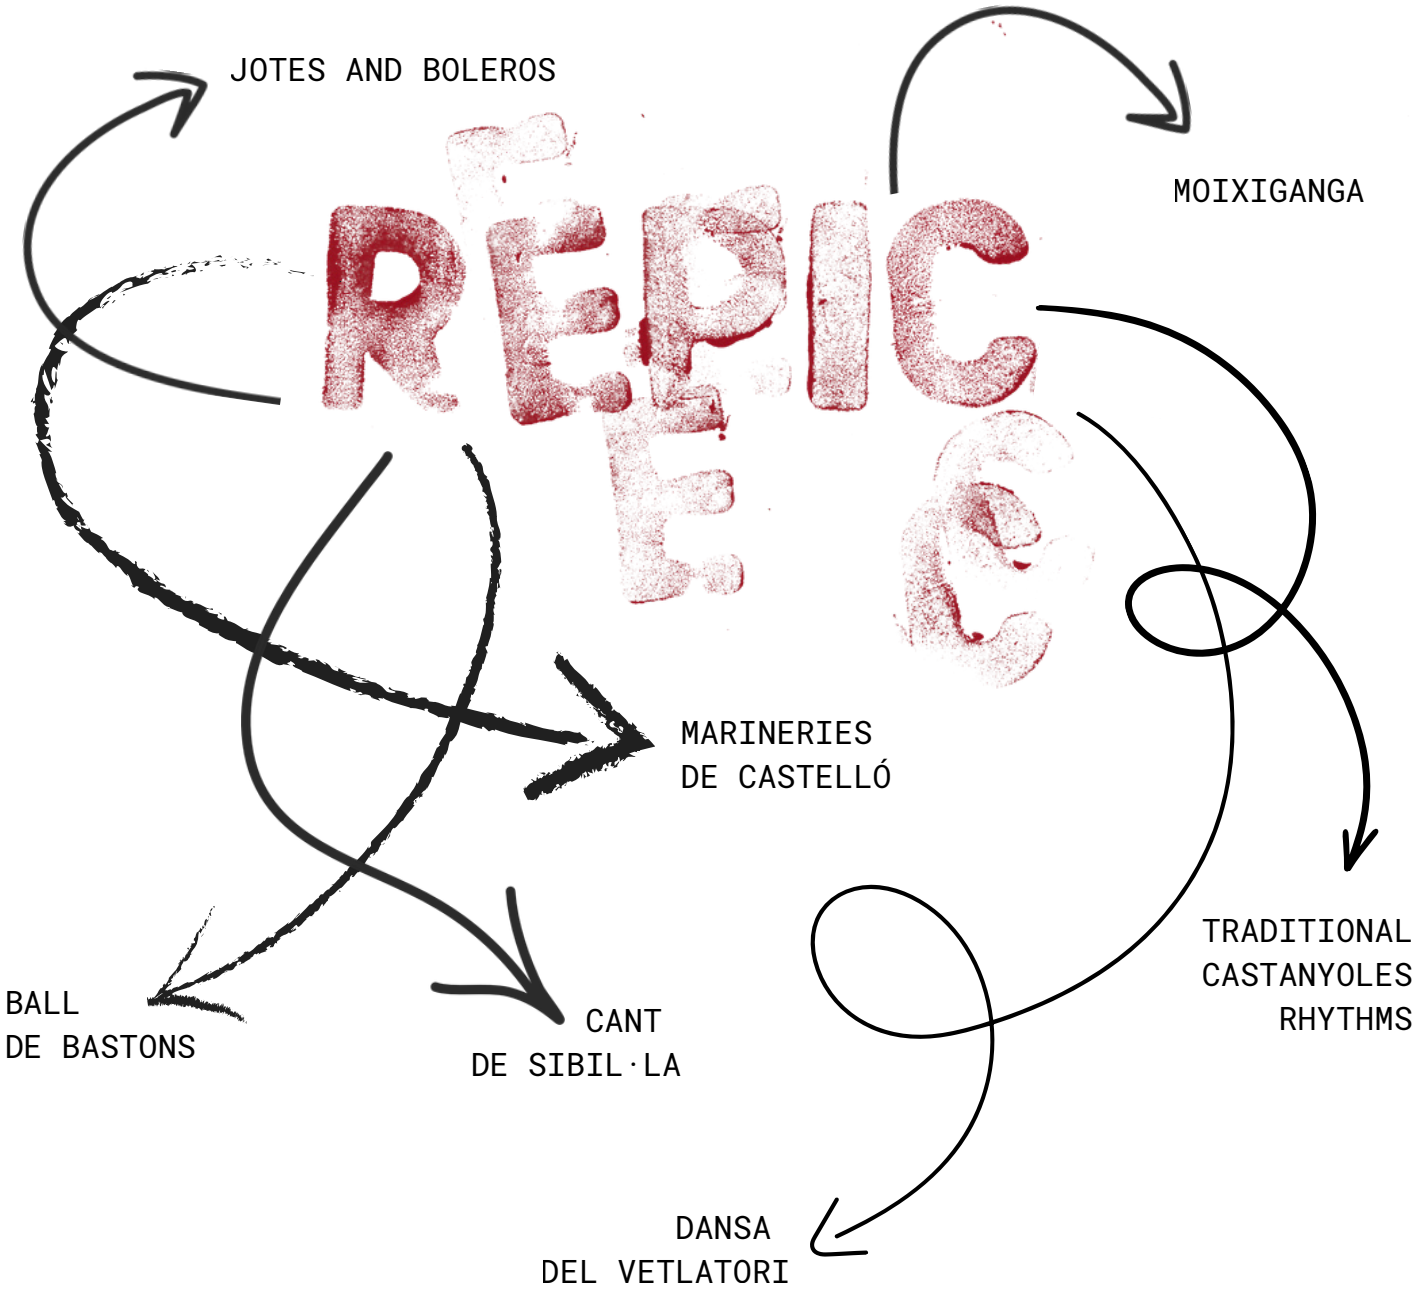

REPICAR
Re: to repeat.
Picar: from Vulgar Latin piccare, the act of striking.

The repic—repetition, variation and insistence—constructs a sound architecture that orders time, defines the quality of the gesture and activates a constant listening between the bodies on stage.

Sounds, silences, textures and rhythmic dynamics contain dramaturgical material.
The piece is constructed from the repeated impact between body, instrument and space, generating a sound and choreographic landscape that brings into play the resistance, persistence and cohesion of the group.
